Tappan Ranch.

Sharlot M. Hall, who was a recent visitor to the above ranch writes of it in the Journal Miner as follows:

The Tappan Ranch is a little oasis in a wilderness of peaks and canyons. Just beyond it Artillery Peak looms up blue against the sky, and in front the Rawhide mountains shut out the very horizon. It is sixty miles to town or post office yet here on the river bank is a very pretty modern home with the comforts and refinements of more populous regions and offering a welcome haven to the traveler. Fields of alfalfa and grain remind one of civilization and the garden and young orchard flourish in neighborly nearness to grim old saguaros and desertbred mesquites.
